

Alignment – Passages/Quotes by Abraham-Hicks

The secret of the universe really is minding your own business. What we mean by that is: don't get so involved in the desires or beliefs of others that you cause confusion or chatter in your own vibration and compromise your own alignment.

Don't make your alignment conditional upon being on the top of a mountain, because when you find yourself in a valley, you won't be so happy. Make your happiness unconditional.

As you show yourself you can feel good regardless of the condition. Now-in your alignment the condition must change!

We were teasing yesterday when we think you should call Facebook Nosebook because you have become a world that sort of has your nose in what's going on with everyone, and it doesn't serve you unless you're really solid in your alignment, because it's really easy to let whatever it is that you're giving your attention to be the reason that you are offering the vibration that you were offering, and then your point of attraction is affected by default.

When you see something unpleasant on Facebook and you click “Like”, in your chiming in, what you're doing is acknowledging that that's the vibrational frequency that I'm at too. We are in a similar vibration or frequency. Well, if you are not in a similar vibration frequency you don't “Like”, you “Yike”.

With the right alignment everything you want makes its way to you.

When you're in alignment, anything you see will not upset you. When you're not in alignment, so much of what you see will upset you.

There's no right or wrong in anything. There's just Alignment and not Alignment.
